

AIRMEN STRIKE AGAIN AS NEW MONTH OPENS

Southwest Germany Target of U. S. Fliers; Allies Hold Big Edge in March.

The Associated Press
XX, April 1—American bombers began a new operations with an attack on southwestern Germany, U. S. headquarters announced.

Continuously with the American, a Swiss government communiqué said American bombers had loosed incendiary bombs on the German border.

Swiss Town Bombed
Apparently a Swiss town, a town of neutral territory, was struck by American bombers.

Swiss radio system went off the air after announcing the planes had penetrated into the Rhine area.

Allies Hold Edge
Despite Thursday night's record of 94 planes by the RAF, an announcement last night showed that March remained a month of victory for British and American forces.

Remember You're Losing an Hour
Did you shove the clock up an hour before you left the office today? If you didn't you'll be in for a bit of a dither next Monday morning when you try to account for the missing hour between home and office.

Clocks will move ahead one hour at midnight tomorrow night. Folks determined to get their full schedule of sleep will have to be up with "fast time" while days will be saying goodnight at 11 p. m. instead of the witching hour of midnight with father upping the time when he winds the clock and puts the cat out.

Clocks were turned back an hour the first Sunday in October last year in keeping with a measure adopted by the city council. The ordinance provided that the clocks would return to Eastern War time at midnight the first Sunday in April.

Collett Sent $853 Bill For His Murder Trial

COLUMBUS, O., April 1—A man whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by the Ohio state penitentiary, James W. Collett, received a bill for $853.30 from the state for his expenses in the recent trial which resulted in his being condemned to the electric chair July 26 for the triple McCoy murders last Thanksgiving eve.

The bill represented costs of defense, prosecution, consisting of witness fees, jury fees, court reporter's fees, clerk of court fees, and justice of the peace costs. This legal action was in the form of an execution sent by Fayette County Prosecutor J. B. Hill to the sheriff of Clinton county to levy on Collett's farm.

Husband in Bucyrus Murder Found; Confesses

Seized in Seneca County After 8-Day Hunt; Gives Jealousy As Motive, Police Say.

(Special to The Star)

BUCYRUS, April 1—John A. Wilson, 61, hunted for eight days in the bluejean death of his common law wife, Daisy, 57, was found and arrested on a Seneca county farm at 10:30 last night.

Police Chief Arthur Stuckert said late this morning that Wilson had "confessed everything" and gave jealousy as the motive for the slaying. Stuckert said Wilson charged that Mrs. Wilson had encouraged the attentions of another man.

In his confession Wilson set out the story of the slaying on March 12, around noon as the date on which he killed his wife in a quarrel over the other man. He admitted knocking her down in the dining room of their home but said he did not know what he used to strike her with or what became of it. In response to a question about a stove poker, Wilson said "it might have been," he didn't know.

REPORT ITALIAN KING TO QUIT

Vittorio Emanuele Said To Be Stepping Out in Favor of Crown Prince.

NAPLES, April 1—Unconfirmed rumors that King Vittorio Emanuele is about to abdicate in favor of Crown Prince Umberto were widely circulated in southern Italy today.

The prince was absent from his villa, having visited his father yesterday, and an aid to the prince said he knew nothing tending to confirm the rumor. Members of the king's household were not immediately available. An associate of Premier Badoglio said yesterday the government had heard nothing from the king to indicate any change in his intention to remain on the throne at least until the allied armies reach Rome.

The king's abdication, however, would remove virtually the only obstacle to the "democratization" of the Badoglio government for which the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia has called.

Up to now, six parties in the Committee of National Liberation ranging from the Communists to Christian Democrats on the right, have refused to collaborate with Badoglio unless the king abdicated.

An associate of Badoglio said yesterday in the absence of the king, a trip to Sicily, that Badoglio would gladly take representatives of all recognized parties into his government, in a statement inspired by Izvestia's claim that Russia is ready to aid in reforming the Italian government before the allies occupy Rome.

It is not so much the monarchy but the six parties oppose as it is Vittorio Emanuele, whom they cite as cause of collaboration with Fascism for 20 years.

TROOPS STAND BY TO AID FLOOD AREA

Two Mississippi state guard troops were standing by today to be ready on one hour's notice to move into any threatened area in Mississippi for evacuation work in combating high flood waters which have already taken nine lives in the south during the past week.

Army planes from the Columbus air base have directed rescuers to lowland spots where rural residents have been stranded. Drowning number five in Mississippi, two in Alabama and one each in Georgia and Louisiana.

Praise was given the 94th division and engineers from Camp McCain, Grenada, for carrying out evacuations over a wide territory. Estimated flood damage has already run into the millions and approximately 1,000 rural residents have had to leave their homes.

Rivers were reported falling in Georgia bottomlands, after more than $2,000,000 damage had been caused to highways and serious damage to farm lands.

Revolver Discharge
Wounds Marion Boy
Robert G. Stafford, 18, of 304 Carner avenue suffered a flesh wound in his left shoulder early last night when a .22 caliber revolver he was examining exploded. His parents said the gun was one he had used last summer in target shooting, and that it apparently exploded accidentally while he was examining it. There was only one bullet in the gun. It was not certain whether it would be necessary to remove it. If his condition progresses satisfactorily, it is expected he will be taken home from the hospital today or Sunday. He is the son of City Fireman and Mrs. C. W. Stafford and is a junior at Harding High.

ALLIES LOSE LEADER

GEN. WINGATE

JUNGLE LEADER DIES IN CRASH

Fabulous Gen. Wingate, Leader of Forces in Burma, Killed in Plane.

NEW DELHI, April 1—Major Gen. Orde Charles Wingate, British bearded warrior whose exploits in the Burma jungles won him the name of the "Lawrence of Arabia" of this war, has been killed in a plane crash in the jungles of the India-Burma frontier.

A brief announcement said "the plane in which he was traveling crashed in our territory and the cause of the accident is unknown." The 41-year-old Wingate, who planned and led the daring expedition which for four months last year played havoc with Japanese communications deep inside their lines in northern Burma, probably died on the night of March 23. His bomber disappeared on an 80-mile flight just before his leadership of the current airborne long range penetration of Burma was allowed to be disclosed.

(A Reuters dispatch from New Delhi said it was believed Wingate's bomber crashed because of a severe storm and that the American crew of five as well as one or two other passengers were killed.)

At the time of his death Wingate was in command of the British and Indian jungle commandos which landed far behind the Japanese lines and which have slashed the important Mandalay-Mylkyna railroad at Indaw and Mawlu.

Wingate, a relative of the late T. E. Lawrence, the famed "Lawrence of Arabia," was a holder of the triple distinguished service cross.

Casualties Mount to 85 in Bombing of Hospital

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NAPLES, April 1—Reports received from the Anzio beachhead last night said casualties in the hospital struck Wednesday night by German bombs had mounted to 85.

Sixteen were known dead and 69 wounded. It was not disclosed how many were patients in the hospital or whether nurses were among those killed.

Marion Soldier Who Lost Arm in Battle Is Home for First Time in Over Two Years

Home from engagements in the Tunisian and Sicilian campaigns is Pfc. Alfred L. Clark, 24, of 455 East George street, one of Marion to be inducted into the Army service on Nov. 25, 1940.

He came to Marion from Battle Creek, Mich., where he is being treated at the Percy Jones general hospital for wounds and the loss of his left arm, suffered in the Italian battle sector early in December.

It was in an engagement on Mount Batana hill, early on the morning of Dec. 4, just about 12 hours after his outfit had taken over, that an explosion of shrapnel struck within about three feet of Pfc. Clark, wounding him and three of his buddies. He was wounded in the side, 14 in his arm and three in his head. He was picked up by the "medics" about 20 hours later, treated at a base hospital and as soon as he was able to be transferred, was evacuated to an Army hospital in Africa. He arrived at Charleston, S. C., three weeks ago after 23 months of overseas service.

He plans to spend the next 10 or 12 days in a 14-day furlough—enjoying his family, his mother's cooking and looking in the admiration of his five-year-old brother, Darrel D., who, not to be outdone by his older brother, wears a soldier suit as near like

RESISTANCE CRUMBLING BEFORE SOVIET ADVANCE

JAP PATROLS NOW 12 MILES FROM IMPHAL

Enemy Forces Press Drive West Into India; Chinese Advance in Burma.

NEW DELHI, April 1—Strong Japanese forces drove further westward in India toward the British base of Imphal, the plans of Manpower, an allied command, acknowledged today. Front dispatches said enemy patrols had stabbed to within a dozen miles of the jungle communications center.

The Japanese advance was reported from the Ukhrul area, 32 miles northeast of Imphal, while British Indian troops were engaged in fierce combat with another Japanese column in the hills east of Kohima, 60 miles north of Imphal.

Japanese losses were heavy, the communiqué said, especially in the battle near Ukhrul.

British Unit Ambushed
Southeast of Imphal, Japanese troops ambushed a small British detachment on the Pail-Tammy road Thursday night, but allied artillery yesterday blasted a road block the enemy had thrown across the road midway between the two towns.

Little activity was reported in the direction of Tiddim, British forward base 100 miles below Imphal in Burma. Capture of Tiddim by the Japanese was disclosed yesterday.

(The Japanese captured Singapore radio asserted last night the Japanese had captured the Mandalay junction between Imphal and Kohima, "virtually isolating the British Indian Fourth army, which now 'faces imminent destruction.'" There was no allied confirmation.)

Chinese Drive On
Vanguard of American-trained Chinese forces in northern Burma continued their drive south from Shaduzup in the Mogaung valley where they are gradually encircling a force of 1,000 Japanese near Laban.

Native Burmese, who have been pushing other Japanese forces southward along the Sumprabum-Mylkyna road below the Dargu river, have advanced to a point south of Kadykyang, 50 miles north of Kyikyna, headquarters said.

U. S. Warships With 50 Carriers Prowl Pacific at Will

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, April 1—Including some of the more than 50 aircraft carriers just disclosed to be prowling the Pacific, were protected today by a radio silence which prevented reports of the devastation wrought on Palau, Japanese sea base guarding the approaches to the Philippines.

But more reports came of supporting air blows on Truk, boldly bypassed by the fleet which moved 1,775 miles west of it to (Turn to BURMA, Page 7)

Marion, Four Nearby Counties REDS SMASHING TOWARD THREE MAJOR POINTS

Reclassification Follows Shortage of Men Workers; Order Limits Factories Chances of Getting New Contracts.

Marion and four nearby counties today went from Group 3 classification to Group 2 in the eyes of the war manpower commission, whose officials in Washington ordered the change on recommendations of state and area WMC heads.

It isn't a new experience for the area, for on two previous occasions it was in Group 2, but this time it brought with it the first real possibility that the change might soon be followed by a minimum 48-hour work week order. Whether this will come along depends somewhat on the results of a survey now being made to determine how many workers would be freed from their present jobs to take new ones in the war production program if the 48-hour minimum week were ordered.

The area affected by today's order is Marion, Crawford, Hardin, Wyandot and Morrow counties.

Major Reason
One of the biggest factors in bringing about the change is the accumulation of unutilized calls for male workers in the area. The U. S. Employment office in Marion, in charge of Fred B. Scheiff, its manager, recently estimated it would require 800 workers to fill these requests, with virtually no men available to meet the requirement.

Industries in the area are placed under tightened regulations in seeking new war contracts as a result of today's change. The area is now described by WMC officials as one in which only renews of contracts at the present level of production, requiring additional workers, should be made and in which no new contracts should be placed if alternative facilities exist elsewhere.

Previously, under Group 3, the area was described as one in which a general labor shortage might be anticipated after six months. Renewals of contracts at the present level of production were recommended, along with new contracts, provided they could be completed within six months.

Two-Way Battle
Although industries are thus handicapped somewhat in getting new business, the change is expected to bring some relief in the way of obtaining workers. For example, under a Group 3 classification, the Marion area was "wide open" to labor recruiting from other areas in higher classifications, and these recruiting parties have taken a number of workers away. Under the Group 2 classification, the area is closed automatically to most recruiting drives and, at the same time, the Marion area is given the right to go into other areas with new contracts to recruit workers for employment here.

Also, stricter controls are brought to bear on workers wishing to leave the Marion area to take a job elsewhere. When the various group classifications were first set up, WMC put the Marion area in Group 2. The area was then in the throes of a war plant construction program and the labor market generally was tight. Then, on May 21, 1943, the area was placed in Group 3, remaining there until Sept. 1, 1943. This continued until the first of this year when the area once more went into Group 3. Thus, today's change is the fourth one for Marion under the WMC setup. Officials exclaimed that the classification is changed to meet changing labor market conditions.

Marion Pilot Who Downed 2 Planes in One Day Decorated

"By direction of the President, the Distinguished Flying Cross was awarded on March 6 to First Lt. Joseph E. Gunder of the Army Air Corps, are the words contained in a dispatch received by The Star today from the 13th Air Force somewhere in the Southwest Pacific. Lt. Gunder was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial patrol of six P-40's over Bougainville in the Solomon Islands, on Nov. 8 last year."

On that patrol mission Gunder downed two Jap dive bombers, damaged a third and successfully negotiated a crash landing when he returned to his base after the flight. Gunder's plane was riddled by Japanese bullets and mechanism controlling landing gear was damaged. When the time came to land, his ship was without wheels. However, the landing was made safely. The details of this unusual day's activities was published in The Star last Nov. 11.

Lt. Gunder was recently the recipient of other citations. He was awarded five Oak Leaf clusters for "meritorious achievement in sustained combat operations." These were added to his Air Medal. At that time his family had received no word about the presentation of the awards.

Lt. Gunder has been overseas since August, last year, and has visited New Zealand several times for checkups after completing flight missions. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Gunder of 247 West Center street. A graduate of St. Mary Parochial school, he attended Dayton college, Dayton, O.

British Isles Build Up As D-Day Approaches

LONDON, April 1—The approach of the western invasion D-day finds the British Isles locked up tighter than a pair of boxing gloves—both inside and out—to prevent leakage of information to the enemy.

The great drama of a series of security steps has been effective today when visitors were excluded from a restricted area 10 miles deep and more than 700 miles long on the southern and eastern coasts of England.

It was emphasized the measures do not indicate the attack is imminent.

ALLIES STRIKE AGAIN IN ITALY

Blow Falls on Long-Idle Central Front North of Cassino.

NAPLES, April 1—Allied troops have made a sudden thrust in the ruggedly mountainous and long-stale central sector of the Italian front, advancing a mile and occupying Mt. Marone, a notable high peak about 13 miles north of Cassino, headquarters announced today.

The height was seized by troops of unidentified nationality who smashed forward under powerful artillery support.

In Cassino, meanwhile, allied heavy guns again shelled the monastery overlooking the devastated town. Two German raiding parties were beaten back from the vicinity of the Cassino railway station.

Two American destroyers hammered German positions near Cassino on the Anzio beachhead and allied infantry repelled a small but sharp attack on their left flank.

Artillery exchanges and patrol clashes marked the snowbound eighth army front.

Allied air forces in Italy were forced by the weather to reduce their activities to about 650 sorties, but the systematic campaign to smash German communications continued with fighter-bomber attacks against bridges along the east coast of Italy.

Two allied planes were lost.

Thousands of exhausted Germans—some estimates placed the number at 200,000 or more—were being hurried toward Odessa across the rapidly narrowing Nazi-held sector above the Black Sea coast, the dispatches added. These remnants of Marshal Fritz von Manstein's once-powerful invasion army faced possible entrapment.

12 WAR WORKERS INJURED IN CRASH

MASSILLON, O., April 1—Twelve war workers were rushed to hospitals after a Canton-New Philadelphia commuter bus and a Continental Bakery Co. truck crashed head-on on state route 21 four miles south of Massillon.

At least two were reported in critical condition.

The bus, operating between Canton plants, Massillon, New Philadelphia and intermediate points, was occupied by approximately 25 war workers. Others suffered minor injuries.

Ambulances dispatched from here brought six of the seriously injured to Massillon City hospital and six to the Republic Steel corporation's Massillon plant hospital.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Vitamins

THE vitamin craze has served to whip up a lot of illogical thinking both among ordinary people and among experts in nutrition. But the illogic of the experts and of the lay take slightly different forms.

The vitamins were a godsend to the experts because the distinguishing sign of an expert is he works in a laboratory. And the experts can take experimental rats in a laboratory and by juggling the vitamins in their diet they can produce a bulimic rat, and scabby rats, and blind rats, and paralyzed rats, and even a rat that is nearly anything in the way of rats. And having reduced the rats to a hairless, blind, paralyzed state of physical, moral and mental decay they could restore them to rosy health by restoring the vitamins.

The rat being a scavenger and having adapted itself to a mixed diet was a perfect laboratory animal for the vitaminists. Thanks to reliable experimental rats, the guinea pig and rabbit, having learned to subsist on lettuce, didn't exhibit any physiologic fire-works at all under vitamin experiments. They probably have learned to manufacture vitamins themselves in their own very abundant intestines. So the vitamin experts became guilty of the fallacy known in logic as false analogy and concluded that men were like rats, and of a right ought to exhibit all the vitamin responses of the rat. Only trouble is they don't.

The favorite vitamin expert's research on man has been to examine a group—say of factory workers—and find their diets deficient in vitamins and their blood concentration of vitamins low and then announce that they are suffering from vitamin deficiency. A little difficulty was encountered when it was found the workers did not have any of the classical and proved syndromes of vitamin deficiency—night-blindness of Vitamin A; neuritis of Vitamin B; pellagra, scurvy of Vitamin C etc.,—so the experts asked the workers some leading questions and found they had fatigue and poor production, and lack of pep, and loss of appetite, and said—"These are the results of vitamin deficiency,"—when any clinician could tell them that such symptoms could come from any one of a thousand things ranging from domestic difficulties to frustrated ambition, to union squabbles, to hanging around the juke box lives.

Now the laymen's wanderings from truth on the subject of the vitamins come from the fallacy known in logic as amphibology. In short, emotional thinking!

Vitamin is a very emotional word. It is too bad the first name proposed for these substances "accessory food factors," was not retained. It is unemotional. But vitamin suggests vitality. If you haven't got vitality you need vitamins. So if you lack pep, or appetite, or sleep poorly, or if your boy friend has cooled off, the natural answer is vitamins, and you go down and squander some hard-earned dough on vitamins for vitality.

Besides, the layman doesn't understand that the diagnosis of vitamin deficiency depends on definite signs, not vague symptoms. There are blood tests for the presence or deficiency of vitamins in your body, and they should be used to decide whether the vitamins are needed. But who would wait for that when the get-health-quick lure beckons from any vitamin bar?

Questions and Answers.
G. D. W.—You recommend to use mineral oil with discretion. What do you recommend for chronic constipation?

Answer:—Fluid extract of cascara sagrada—five to ten drops or more at bedtime. Enough to get desired effect in the morning.

A TALK on "Russia" will be given by Samuel D. Rosen of Chicago to close the program season for the Marion County Federation of Women's Clubs Tuesday evening in The Star auditorium. The federation season will close May 3, with the annual community fine arts festival to be held at Hotel Harding.

Sharing the Tuesday evening program will be members of the Marion Lecture-Recital Club Chorus who will be heard in a group of songs preceding the talk. A public address system will be installed in the auditorium for the program which will open at 8 o'clock. Jones is director of the chorus and the accompanist is Miss Rosaline Manzo. Mrs. Charles E. Feaver is president of the chorus.

A native of a peasant village on the banks of the Dniester river in southeast Russia, Mr. Rosen was graduated from high school in a neighboring town and attended the New Russian university at Odessa where he received his master's degree. Later he saw service in the Russo-Japanese war in 1904-05 and escaped to the United States a year later. In this country he studied, first at Chicago's Y.M.C.A., and then did postgraduate work at the University of Chicago and Northwestern University.

Returning to Russia in 1930, Mr. Rosen travelled thousands of miles to observe and judge the steps of its development since the Revolution, aided by his ability to speak the Russian language with perfect fluency. Since that time he has made three additional study tours of Russia, including the "ism" countries and the democracies as well.

to themselves teachers having itching ears, and they have turned their ears from the truth, and are turned unto fables."

THEIR fate is very clear for again we turn to our inspired library to read, 2 Thess. 2:10-11, "Because men receive not the love of the truth that they might be saved—God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie." Look at that statement honestly my precious eternal soul, we have not used cunningly devised fables, we have been honest enough to review the "sure word of prophecy" which is "forever settled in heaven."

That Word warns us, John 3:3 and 5, "Except a man be born again he can neither see nor enter into the kingdom of God." The New Birth begets new conversation for we turn again to Paul's record, Phil. 3:20-21, "Our conversation is in Heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ; Who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto Himself."

Impossible says the Intellectualist; while faith fastens securely to Luke 1:37, "With God nothing shall be impossible." Therefore we rest content in His promise as recorded in Heb. 10:37, "For yet a little while and He that shall come will come and will not tarry."

Loss was about $1.

Britain Is Worried, Too

FOREIGN SECRETARY ANTHONY EDEN has denied stoutly to the house of commons that the United States dictates British foreign policy. Britain, too, is having misgivings about foreign policy, contrary to the opinion of the Anglophobes in the United States who are sure that wily John Bull is planning to steal good-hearted old Uncle Sam's shirt. Many Englishmen frankly fear the shirt-stealing may be reversed and are needing their government to take precautionary measures.

The similarity of misgivings is a clue to the real source of foreign policy uncertainty. It is not traceable wholly to the governments in power, or to individuals within those governments, but to their positions relative to international events. Both the United States and Great Britain were forced into a war precipitated by the dynamic policy of Germany, a policy designed to take advantage of their uncertainty and wilful neglect of the rising threat to their security. Germany had come to stand for positive, as against Britain's negative, attitudes.

When Mr. Churchill became prime minister and, later, when the United States entered the war with the beginning of its lend-lease policy, Anglo-American objectives became positive only to the extent that they called for Germany's defeat. Japan's entry in the war broadened the objective, to include a new enemy. But aside from the general purposes stated in the Atlantic Charter—and now, themselves, being questioned—the United States and Great Britain were unable to present concrete alternatives to the detailed plans of the Axis. We were fighting defensively. We still are. The seeming weakness of our foreign policy is inherent in that fact.

In World War I, later cynicism to the contrary notwithstanding, the Allies were inspired by belief in the inevitable spread of democracy as the result of their efforts; they fought to make the world safe for democracy, as an antidote for the poisonous monarchical systems whose ambitions and hates were blamed for the war. They had the psychological benefit of a crusading spirit. They were fighting for a positive and expanding cause. Even cynics will not deny it gave them and their sympathizers a sense of purpose lacking today, when they must admit they see nothing clearly beyond the performance of their military task.

Meanwhile, both believe Russia must have what they lack—a vision of the future, but the fact is they have no evidence on this point stronger than their own surmises. Russian foreign policy, as yet, shows no sign of long-range purpose, but many signs of hasty improvisations. It does not mean there is no greater purpose to be served by the tremendous effort of the United Nations than their own survival, but only that the purpose has not yet emerged from the confusion of military expediency precipitated by Germany's challenge to international security.

Statistics Aren't Everything

STATISTICS on the numerical strength of minority groups in this country, which are supposed to be feeling touchy about foreign policy decisions and certain details of military strategy, cannot tell the whole story.

The resentment of minorities cannot be measured statistically. There are Irish critical of this government's attitude toward Irish neutrality. There are Finns who differ with the attitude toward Finland. There are Italians resentful of things that have happened in Italy, and there are Poles who think wrong decisions have been made about Poland.

But to claim that the government therefore should temper its decisions because there are so many Russian-born, Irish-born, or German-born Americans, or because there are a certain number of Jews or Catholics in the United States is to surrender unconditionally the first tenet of American faith. This nation hasn't grown to be what it is by trying to appease the component parts of its population, but by trying to advance their common interests as Americans.

Spokesmen for the minority groups, themselves, should be first to deny that they are more interested in their minority identities than in the general welfare of the United States. It is a certainty that many members of the groups have been gratuitously insulted by the too-ready assumption that they can be played off against one another by political manipulation, or that they are seeking political appeasement or plotting political revenge. If that were true, the United States would have lost the outstanding characteristic of its greatness—its common devotion to the ideal of freedom here for all its citizens, regardless of origin or belief.

So They Say—

There can be no lasting peace arising from a negotiated peace. Our enemies must have the message brought home to them in words of flying steel that this world will never again permit their inhuman intolerance, their intellectual dishonesty and their military chicanery. —Capt. John K. Richards to midshipmen graduates.

Grand Strategy Seen Resting with Army in Europe, Navy in Pacific.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THE time has come when it can only help, can do no possible harm, to say that the grand strategy of the United States is resting with the Army in Europe and the Navy in the Pacific. The main concentration of our forces against Japan is in the Central Pacific; the tactics and the weapons may be new but the basic plan of the campaign was adopted by the navy many years ago.

The fundamental decisions which were once military secrets are no longer secrets. The main concentration of our forces against Japan is in the Central Pacific; the tactics and the weapons may be new but the basic plan of the campaign was adopted by the navy many years ago.

There have been alternate and conflicting views in this country and abroad as to how the war should be fought. From Pearl Harbor to the present there have been many discussions, some compromise and some deviations. But in the end the long-standing orthodox professional views of the navy and the army have prevailed.

There is no longer any doubt about it. When we see the great force which is under the command of Admiral Nimitz at Iwo Jima and the other great force which is being prepared under Gen. Eisenhower in the British Isles, we have the proof that at the end of all the conferences it is Admiral King and Gen. Marshall who have set the American strategy.

Bearing this in mind, that the regular army has dominated the European war and the regular navy the Pacific war, many controversies which have agitated congress and the people, many events which have perplexed them, fall into a new perspective.

There is, first of all, the controversy about whether to fight Hitler first or Japan first. Now that we see the great aircraft carrier and battleship force which has been constructed since Pearl Harbor for our main offensive against Japan, we know that the kind of war the navy decided to fight against Japan could not have begun any sooner. To have created this new amphibious power in two and a half years is a miracle. It could not have been created in less time. Until it was created the United States could not fight only secondary and holding campaigns in the Pacific.

We now see that though a great deal was said about Hitler first, this priority has held for the British, and of course for the Russians, but not for us. Our main offensives have, in fact, been mounted simultaneously in both theaters. If a decision is reached first in Europe, it will not be because we gave the European war priority. It will be because we have two powerful allies in the European theater, and the enemy can be attacked from two fronts; whereas in the Pacific theater our only great ally, China, is unable to take the offensive.

Pacific Campaign

The controversy about the support of Gen. MacArthur is by many supposed to turn on whether he should have received reinforcements that have been assigned to the European theater. But in fact the real controversy, on which strong men have differed, has not been whether to put more force behind Gen. MacArthur or Gen. Eisenhower. It has been whether the war against Japan was to be directed by the Navy, in accordance with its long established plan for a central Pacific offensive to the Philippines and China, or whether the main effort against Japan could be made by Gen. MacArthur from Australia toward the Philippines and to China. In this argument the Navy has prevailed.

Much perplexity, and a lot of misdirected political agitation would disappear if this were clearly understood by the nation.

When we know that the high command of the Army has never swerved from its conviction that the German army must be defeated on the continent of Europe, many things become clearer. Thus the high command has never believed that Germany could be bombed to defeat, or could be defeated from the Mediterranean—through the so-called soft underbelly.

It agreed to the North African campaign in 1942, because in 1942 it was not ready to invade the continent. Its objective in that campaign was to reopen the Mediterranean by driving the Axis out of Africa and Sicily—a necessary objective, but a limited one.

Always it has kept its attention fixed on the main objective—the continental invasion, the so-called second front. Therefore, it has never made more than a limited commitment of our forces in the Mediterranean, and all operations have had to be conducted with limited force. This explains why the Fifth Army has been stalled at Cassino.

Food Prospects for 1944

Farmers Tackle Biggest Production Quotas in History.

BY OVID A. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

WITH spring planting season at hand, farmers appear well set for their biggest and most important food production job. The job is larger than last year's, when the goal appeared at the start of the planting season, to be beyond attainment. Despite spring floods and shortages of manpower, farm machinery and other equipment, farmers came through with the largest output on record.

This year's goals have been set above 1943 because prospective wartime demands are larger and reserves of basic food raw materials much lower.

Impending invasion of western Europe, continued engagements in the Pacific, increasing demands from allies, need for foreign relief and record domestic requirements make agriculture's task vital.

Government food officials are reasonably hopeful, though they note some dark spots on the horizon.

Recent surveys indicate that the land to be planted will come close to the 380,000,000 acres called for by war food administration. Such an acreage would be the largest ever planted.

Officials await, however, a report to be issued March 20 by the agriculture department's crop reporting board on planting intentions. This report, issued annually before the planting season, is based on a widespread check of farmers. It gives estimates on prospective averages of various crops.

The report will be studied for trouble spots. Any estimate below the needs for a particular crop is the signal for action. It might indicate a shortage of labor or machinery needed for the production of the particular crop, or a price insufficient to encourage farmers to risk it.

THIS year's goals, emphasize "direct-food crops," such as dry beans and peas, potatoes, vegetables, sweet potatoes, and soybeans, and livestock products such as milk and eggs.

Fewer hogs, beef cattle and commercial broilers are called for. Shift in emphasis from meat animals to direct food crops and milk and eggs reflects reduced supplies of livestock feed and lack of land and manpower to expand feed production to limits necessary to maintain hog and beef production at last year's levels.

In terms of diet, the goals would set 1945 consumer table of more beans, peas, soybeans, vegetables and eggs, and possibly the same quantity of milk—but less pork and beef.

In terms of crops, the goals call for large acreages of wheat, corn, soybeans, peanuts, vegetable crops, potatoes sugar beets and sugarcane, tobacco, and legume and hay crop seeds, but smaller acreages of oats, rye, grain sorghums, and flax. Acro-ages of cotton, rice and barley would remain unchanged.

Farmers and food officials are watching the weather. Outlook from this angle has improved during recent weeks after a dry fall and winter. Experts say crop yield prospects for the country as a whole are not as favorable as at this time in 1942 and 1943, but are as good as in 1940 and 1941. In the eastern half of the country, prospects are described as favorable, but in the west, where fall and winter rains were below normal, the outlook is less favorable.

Actual yield is determined primarily, however, by the weather during the growing season.

Reports from the weather bureau tell of substantial improvement in prospects for the winter wheat crop. The nation will need every bushel of wheat that can be produced, because large reserves on hand at the start of the war have been depleted.

Because of the relatively open and mild fall and winter, farmers have made unusually good progress in plowing and otherwise preparing land for spring planting.

Big question mark in the production picture is labor.

Officials estimate 72,000,000 more man-days of labor will be required this year than last, if food goals are to be reached.

Uncertainty has been created by a directive of the selective service system that deferment of 1,700,000 agricultural workers must be reviewed. WPA says that is essential to continue deferment of workers employed full time on productive farms. Should the review lead to any substantial drafting of farm workers, the labor situation might become critical.

Another important factor is machinery. Last year a critical shortage of new machinery was a principal farm-belt complaint. Prospects are improved this year, with an increased allocation of raw materials for making general planting, tillage and harvesting equipment.

The Truman senate committee on the national war program said in a recent report that an important part of the machinery program was behind production schedule.

Supplies of other materials, such as fertilizers, insecticides and gasoline, are available to farmers in larger quantity than a year ago.

Price prospects—a prime factor in production—appear generally satisfactory. There are a few crops for which farmers have asked higher guarantees, including peanuts and soybeans. These crops are needed in record quantities for vegetable oil.

WPA officials see these difficulties ahead.

Farmers will have to work long hours.

There will be less machinery than is needed.

There will not be all the manpower desired.

Officials believe last year's ac-

Love Letters

Movement To Turn Them Back Into Paper for War Salvage Strikes Us As Sound Notion.

By DAMON RUNYON

I THINK it was someone in Chicago who recently suggested that old love letters be turned in on the waste paper drive.

It struck me as a great idea. I regretted I had none to contribute myself. I was also a burn-'em-up-right-away fellow on that kind of correspondence.

I do not mean to convey the impression received many love letters, I never was a type that inspired tender missives. But the fact I did receive I promptly destroyed. It was a matter of gallantry with me.

I shall always remember the one I chucked up and swallowed in Otto Floet's saloon in Denver long years ago. It was from a little lady who worked in the Home Bar restaurant, and I digested the document as I saw approaching me a switchman gentleman who had been going with the lady for some time before I cut in and who I suspected of intent search me for incriminating evidence.

I was not wrong in this suspicion. He held—with one hand and frisked me with the other. I was still gulping on the letter and unable to speak coherently, which the switchman gentleman took as indications of great fear of my part. He kept remarking, soothingly:

"Don't be scared, podner. If you ain't got a note from Sal on you, you won't be hurt, and if you have I'll kill you as painlessly as possible as you've got nothin' to worry about."

I HAVE always felt there was poetic justice in the fact that he finally bought me a "bee" by way of apology for his search and thus washed down the little wad of paper that was stuck in my throat just at a moment when I felt I would have to eject it.

I do not now remember the full content of the letter—it was a very long time ago—but I do remember it carried a touching postscript that said, "I shall love you forever and always and I wish you would lend me $10 as my present is due."

I never wrote any love letters because of parental admonition early in life. I was 19 years old and was in the throes of composing a confession of sweet emotion to a beautiful girl of nine who went to the same school I did when my old man came in. On learning the nature of my effort, he said:

"Son, I am now going to give you some advice about women which I hope and trust you will bear in mind all your life. It is as follows: Don't write love letters."

Well, having nothing to contribute to the waste paper drive on my own account, I thought of a friend of mine, now in his middle years, who has always been a bit of a Lohengrin with a blazing love affair on tap at all times.

It occurred to me that he must have a raft of old love letters and that I would be doing a patriotic service by getting him to contribute them to the paper drive.

"WHY sure," he said, when I spoke to him about the matter. "I must have a million of them. I kept the love letters I received figuring I might go broke some day and need the blank sides for my own correspondence though you would be surprised how many I use both sides of the paper writing love letters. They must have spoiled lots of paper that way."

"I suppose you have them in the attic or an old trunk?" I said. "Perhaps put away in lavender? And surely arranged in neat ribbon-tied bundles?"

"No," he said. "I haven't got an attic. They are in an empty egg-crate in the garage. You wait and I'll get some of them."

He returned presently with both fists full of old letters which he said he had grabbed at random from his store and sat down to read one written on pink paper. He read it himself and by the time he reached the last page tears were running down his cheeks. Then he read one on pale blue paper and sobbed openly.

"They're from Grace and Mable," he said in a choking voice. "They were written 20 years ago. I only wish I could remember who these dames were."

I left him fairly rocking with lachrymoseness over a letter dated 1912 that he said was from Henrietta but he could not think Henrietta what.

H-Day

By Truman Twell

There will be wallpaper cleaner between the sheets and soap chips will turn up in the breakfast food. The step ladder will be the center of attraction in the living room, and the sugar bowl will come up missing.

The old man will have a crick in his back, and the kids will get tired of potato soup. All the current magazines will be at the bottom of the pile of the old magazines, and somebody will drop paint on mama's new hat.

The cat will scold his tail in the scrub bucket, and there will be a war of wallpaper in the pruned. The rugs will be pulled up in front of the front door, and furniture will be piled up in back of the back door.

The radio will be disconnected, and all social engagements cancelled for the duration. The telephone will be buried at the bottom of a pile of draperies, and no one will be able to find the tooth paste.

People on the street will stare in through the uncurtained windows, and the people inside the house will stare back, pretending they see nothing funny about sitting on the floor with their chins propped on a window sill.

Bottles of ammonia will grace the side board, and bottles of liniment will be kept on the bedside table. Beds will be switched, bureau drawers will be turned upside down and everything put back somewhere else.

Everybody will keep coming up and saying, "Do you want this any more, so why don't we throw it away and get rid of it?" Sandwiches will be the piece de resistance, and there will be a run on meals that can be thrown together in five minutes, or less.

Temper will get snappish, and patience will run out. The odor of patent cleaning compounds will hang over the premises for days, and about warnings will be issued night and morning about the consequences of coming into the house with muddy shoes.

Before it is all over it will be estimated that approximately $1,000 worth of repair work is needed to put the old dump into shape, but a compromise will be reached and the kitchen table and chairs will be painted, instead. Clothing will disappear and it won't be till next housecleaning time that anyone will know for sure where half the essentials of life were stuffed away for safe-keeping.

No one has a kind word to say for it, but everybody is forced to endure it. When she sees that look in her eyes, it's housecleaning time. H-day is at hand, and there's nothing anyone can do about it except remember that cleanliness is next to Godliness. There must be some excuse for it.

Don't Blame the Postoffice

Army, Navy Responsible for Service Mail.

By The Associated Press

When something goes wrong with mail delivery between you and a sailor or soldier in foreign service, don't blame the postoffice.

Thousands of man-hours are being wasted by postoffice employees trying to explain something that isn't their responsibility. Except as a pickup and delivery agency the postoffice department hasn't anything to do with military mail.

Most frequent complaint, according to postal officials, who have been hearing the most complaints, is something like this:

"I haven't heard from my boy for weeks. Until now, he has been writing every few days. I'm afraid he has been killed or captured or something."

The fact is, the Army and Navy usually can notify a soldier's next of kin if he has been killed or injured long before his last letter has been received. Failure to get such notices through within seven to 10 days is rare.

Army complaints should be made to the adjutant general's office, Navy complaints to the director of naval communications. With rare exceptions, however, most complaints shouldn't be made at all.

When the looked-for letter fails to come, chances are the service man has been moved recently to a remote post where routine mail pickups haven't been established, or is at sea on an extended cruise.

The Army and Navy services are doing a fine job, but there are some things they can't lick. In some sections of Burma, mail moves by pack train. A sailor's mail may follow him for weeks and months before it catches up.

There is still another reason—but scarcely anyone ever admits it. About 12 per cent of the nearly 30,000,000 pieces of mail handled each week by the services is addressed incorrectly.

Lamour Movie Opens Tonight

"Riding High" Booked with "Million Dollar Kid" at Marion.

"Riding High," starring Dorothy Lamour, Dick Powell and Victor Moore, and "Million Dollar Kid" with the Dead End Kids, will be shown midnight tonight through Monday at the Marion theater.

Counterfeit money and an abandoned silver mine enter the plot of "Riding High" when Miss Lamour, cast as an ex-busboy singer, comes west to start operation of an old mine and finds that there are no funds to run on.

"Million Dollar Kid" features the predicaments in which the Dead End Kids find themselves when they try to solve the family problems of a millionaire. Tuesday and Wednesday "Riding High" and "Week-End Pass" starring Dorothy Lamour, Dick Powell and Victor Moore, will be screened.

Crowded defense housing situations provide laughs in "Riding High." "Week-End Pass" features the adventures of a defense worker, who wins a bonus of a week-end pass to spend a supposedly quiet vacation in the country.

"Arizona Trail," with Tex Ritter and Fuzzy Knight, and "Swingtime Johnny," starring the Andrews sisters will be shown Thursday through Saturday.

Tex Ritter foils the plans of a wealthy land-grubber in "Arizona Trail."

The efforts of a pipe-organ manufacturer to convert his plant to the production of high explosive shells for the war effort become slightly involved in "Swingtime Johnny."

Bronte Drama On Ohio Screen

"Jane Eyre" Booked Through Thursday; Orson Welles in Star Role.

"Jane Eyre," starring Joan Fontaine and Orson Welles, now showing through Thursday at the Ohio theater, brings to the screen a stirring story of tempestuous love linked with mystery and dramatic emotion.

Taken from Charlotte Bronte's celebrated novel, the story has cast Orson Welles as Edward Rochester, the brooding, silent master of Thornfield Hall, who has sought all his life for a woman he could love.

During his search he had found, first his wife, driven mad by her own excesses, a French dancing girl, a Viennese milliner, a countess, and finally he finds Jane, played by Joan Fontaine, only to have her torn from him by the revelation of a secret from the past.

Margaret O'Brien is cast as Rochester's ward, Peggy Ann Garner in the role of Jane as a girl and John Sutton enacts the part of kindly Dr. Rivers.

"Four Jills and a Jeep" starring Carole Landis, Kay Francis, Martha Raye and Millicent Rogers, featuring John Harvey, Dick Haymes and Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra will start Friday and continue for seven days.

"Hate is a musical comedy that is something new with a story full of adventure, romance, songs and dances, based on actual experiences of the four stars while on an overseas tour.

The tour started when Martha Raye opened her mouth and later found she had talked them into an entertainment program for the boys overseas.

Texas Not Showing Signs of Leaving Democratic Ranks

BY GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 1 — Although G. O. P. leaders are expressing hopeful glances toward the states of the solid Democratic South, Texas, richest of all Southern states in electoral votes, shows little sign of deserting Democratic ranks, at least as of today.

The great majority of Texas voters today prefer a Democratic president in 1944, and topped the list of their preferences, on the basis of the present survey, is President Roosevelt.

Among those in Texas indicating a preference for a Republican president in 1944, Governor Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, leads the list in popularity.

These facts are disclosed in a survey embracing more than a dozen scores of towns and cities in the shop of Hardens Music store.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

"YE-AR," Shumway replied, "there's plenty of 'em strung along. And you see a lot of 'em busy talking to drivers. But don't worry. They'll stop us, but they'll wave us on again when they see the card that guardsman handed me."

"Very probably," I assented absently. Then my anxiety overcame my aversion to any conversation with Shumway, and I put a sharp question.

"But what does this all mean? Haven't you any idea?"

Another guardsman flagged us before he could answer, soberly inspected the card in Shumway's hand and waved him on. But the taxi driver either had trouble in starting his car, or pretended it. At any rate, he did not start until the guardsman had waved him on out of hearing. Then he turned in his seat and looked at me with a sheepish grin.

"I have no more idea than you have," he said; then added with meaning emphasis: "If you know what I mean."

But I knew how I must answer that question. I drew myself up, assumed a slight air of hauteur, and said quietly, "I haven't the slightest idea what you mean, and as you don't know the answer to my question, suppose we set up to Easthampton."

A disagreeable grin pulled his mouth out of shape.

"Okay, if that's the way you want it," he said, and drove on.

There was silence till we reached the library, then:

"Please be back in twenty-five minutes," I told him, repeating the agreement I had made with him.

The Stars Say—

By Sunday, April 2

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a fairly pleasant and prosperous one, in spite of a few annoying or disturbing situations—probably due to the fact that the sun is in the sign of Cancer, which is a sign of emotion, and the moon is in the sign of Libra, which is a sign of peace. The emphasis may be on social, domestic or romantic engagements, with prosperity and personal gratification in sight. Expanding rays stimulate financial ambitions and aspirations, with friends and income in plentiful places awaiting. Health and happiness are progressing.

A solid horn on this day may be possessed of many capabilities, ambitions and aspirations, which are high spots of attainment and pleasure. It may occupy a high place in society or the profession.

For Monday, April 3

MONDAY'S horoscope is a most promising one, with noble, generous and expansive vibrations to stimulate business and personal affairs. There may be many telephone booths, I said.

"Okay," he said, "I've got to get out of here. You're right. You'd think the whole army and navy had gone AWOL." I climbed into the taxi, and on the way to the drugstore tried to brush away the shadow of disaster which had begun with the arrival of my unexpected guests. But it was still with me when I picked up the receiver, called Lillian's number, and heard her voice, answering my utterance of her name.

"Yes, Madge, right here. Anything wrong?"

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

"It's the time you said," he finally said me, and I gave a simultaneous gasp.

"Oh!" I said.

Then I looked at my wrist watch. "So it is," I told him. "I'll be through here in two or three minutes. Please wait over there." I gestured vaguely toward the door, then returned with apparent haste to my copying of one of the maps. When I had worked for three minutes, I stood up and began to gather together the maps and books. The attendant hurried up immediately.

"Did you find what you wanted?" she asked.

"Oh yes, indeed," I returned. "I had wonderful luck. Where shall I put these?"

"I'll take care of them," she said. "I know just where they all go."

"Thank you so much," I answered, and then, gathering up my written notes and cramming them into my purse, I hurried over to Shumway.

"Now if you'll please take me to a drug store where there are

WHO WAS IT—JOHN?

THE BOY

HE SAID YOU'RE WASTING YOUR TIME BY RUSHING OVER. MARKY WON'T LET ANYBODY IN THE KITCHEN WHEN SHE'S COOKING—NOT EVEN HIM—AND HE'S WEARING AN APRON.

I'M READY TO LEAVE, BUT IF SHE WOULDN'T LET HIM IN THE KITCHEN, WHERE DID HE GET THE POTATOES?

IN THE LIVING ROOM—SO HE COULD LISTEN TO THE RADIO.

I'LL GIVE HIM A PIECE OF MY MIND FOR PEELING POTATOES IN THE LIVING ROOM.

AND TELL HIM I HAVE DONE THE SAME THING.

NEXT WEEK?
